It's Christmas in Creemore

by Trina Berlo

Santa will be making the rounds during Creemore's annual Christmas celebrations, this weekend.

The festivities begin with the annual Tree Lighting on the Friday night at Station on the Green, hosted by the Creemore and Area Ratepayers Association and the Tree Society of Creemore, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Children are encouraged to create their own hats for the crazy hat contest and a chance to win the honour of flipping the switch to light the tree. The top hatters will win prizes donated by Cardboard Castles.

Free hotdogs, hot chocolate and cider will be served and there will be carol singing throughout the evening.

Fuel up Saturday morning at Breakfast with Santa at Nottawasaga Creemore Public School. Themed treasure trays will be raffled and the popular kids-only shopping room will be open, where children can purchase gifts for their parents and siblings.

Santa will make an appearance to visit with the children and pose for photos.

On both Saturday and Sunday, there will be a Christmas Market at Station on the Green in morning, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Creemore Santa Claus Parade, organized by the Creemore BIA, is at 1:30 p.m.

The parade will start at the Simcoe County Works Yard on County Road 9, head east to Mill Street, continue south on Mill Street to Edward Street turn on Mary Street where it will pass the nursing home before ending its route. Santa will greet guests at the Creemore Log Cabin after the parade. Hot chocolate and treats will be served.

Those interested in entering a float are asked to be at the staging area before 1 p.m. All the information about the parade is posted at experiencecreemore.com.

For full details about the weekend's activities, see the community calendar on page 2.

Food and toys collected at Saturday's festivities

There are many ways to give locally this weekend.

Beginning Friday evening and continuing on Saturday morning, the Creemore Firefighters' Association is holding its annual Fill-the-Wagon Food Drive. Firefighters will be in front of Foodland collecting non-perishable food items from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday and again from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Donations go to the Clearview Stayner Food Bank.

Members of County of Simcoe Paramedic Services are collecting toy donations at numerous holiday events in the area, including the Creemore Santa Claus Parade. Donations of new, unwrapped toys will be accepted at various locations and parades across Simcoe County to be distributed to local children and families in need by charitable organizations working in partnership with County of Simcoe Paramedic Services.

Echo toy and food drive continues in December

For those who can't donate at the parade Saturday, The Creemore Echo's annual food and toy drive continues.

Gifts will be distributed through Salvation Army Hope Acres and nonperishable food will go to Clearview Stayner Food Bank.

The Echo is also accepting monetary donations for both Clearview Stayner Food Bank and Hope Acres.

Hope Acres' Rehabilitation Centre is an alcohol and addiction treatment centre that gets the bare minimum in government funding and also relies on donations.

All food collected during the drive will be distributed by Clearview Stayner Food Bank, operated by the Clearview Ministerial Association.

Drop all donations off at The Creemore Echo office, located at 3 Caroline St. W. The toy and food drive runs until Dec. 17.

Clearview given new library construction deadline

by Trina Berlo

Connie Leishman, chair of the Stayner library building project committee, says work has resumed and, as far as they know, contractors have been paid, meaning the project is back on track.

The building project went off the rails, so to speak, when financial problems thrust Bondfield Construction Company into the national spotlight and resulted in the loss of larger contracts, also causing delays at the Stayner building site, where a new library is being built as an addition to the arena.

Leishman updated Clearview council on the delays and the updated construction schedule at a Nov. 19 meeting, saying she prefaced her update with an apology for not having communicated to council earlier.

Leishman said she was cautious about saying too much publicly before knowing more, so she decided to stay mum while the municipality worked with Bondfield to get them back on track with the library project.

"We were getting nervous about the thing - that maybe they weren't going to come back and nothing was going to happen and then we'd have to go to some kind of legal action, which isn't something we wanted to do only because it's very painful, very expensive, and it takes forever to get through that kind of process," said

Township officials have been assured access to the Stayner arena community hall by March.

Leishman. "So we sat patiently and watched, and they communicated with us quite often."

Uncertainty around steel tariffs caused further problems but eventually, after assurances that they were following through on the project, a new construction schedule was provided.

"We're a very small project so their bigger projects were their priority and I understand that but being a municipal project, we are in the public eye so things had to happen. It got a little dicey and we were quite nervous about the whole thing but it did come together and we do have a schedule. I can't say I'm not still nervous about it, because I am but everyday something happens there," said Leishman.

"They lost some of their bigger contracts so now they have time for us, which is okay. They didn't go out of business and the bond company came to their rescue and assured us they would be paying all the bills."

She said in the end, the project is back on track. The township has been assured that the arena's community hall will be accessible by March and that the new library will be complete by the end of September.

Leishman said the project is still within budget, despite a delay of about two-and-a-half months. (The construction of the 7,000 square foot Stayner library branch was approved at a cost of $3,807,892.)

Leishman said she drew on her experience as a trustee for the Simcoe County District School Board. At the beginning of her term, she said the company hired to build the high school in Stayner went bankrupt and it went into litigation, something she wanted to avoid this time around.

"I don't think I've ever seen a municipal project go smoothly in my life," she said.

Avoid eating romaine lettuce: health unit

Residents are reminded to avoid eating romaine lettuce and salad mixes containing romaine lettuce following a notice by the Public Health Agency of Canada (PHAC) of an outbreak of E. coli infections in Ontario, Quebec and several states in the United States linked to romaine lettuce.

In total, 18 cases of E. coli across Ontario and Quebec, based on the investigation to date, are linked with exposure to romaine lettuce identified as a source of the outbreak.

E. coli are a naturally occurring bacteria that live in the intestines of cattle, poultry and other animals that can be transmitted through food or water that has been contaminated.

Most people who become ill from an E. coli infection will recover on their own, however some people, including pregnant women, those with weakened immune systems,

EDITORIAL

It's fun and games until...

Regular puzzlers will notice a change to The Echo's Fun and Games page this week.

By coincidence, we have lost two mainstays on the games page this week.

Creemore centenarian Ken Thornton has gone to live with his son in Waterdown, and with him have gone Spike & Rusty, who are no doubt in need of some R&R.

We express tremendous gratitude to Thornton who has been puzzling out riddles between the two nails for the amusement of Echo readers for a decade.

He has made so many valuable contributions to the Echo in that time, including his Coffee with Ken community profiles and other creative writing.

We are sad to see Spike & Rusty go, but we know Thornton is now safe and sound with family and for that we are grateful.

We have also come to the end of the run for The Avridge Farm cartoon, by Jeff Wilson.

Wilson's Flatt's Farm and The Avridge Farm ran in area newspapers in the 1990s and later began a long run in the Echo. The cartoon depicted the comical side of country life.

For fans of the comic strip, Wilson has published two new books about farm life: The Complete Flatt's Farm and The Avridge Farm Companion. (The books cost $10 and are available online at Amazon.ca or by e-mailing jeffwil58@gmail.com.)

At this time we wish to recognize Barbara Simpson, who, years after leaving Creemore for the sunny south, continues to create sudoku puzzles for the Echo each week.

We will also continue publishing the challenging crossword by Canadian Criss Cross and we are so happy to say that Fred Mills has graciously agreed to keep sending us his funnies (which for the most part are accepted gratefully and only occasionally don't make it past our censorship panel).

We have also decided to ditch the weather report since most people have their weather app at the ready and our staff meteorologist is set to retire. So, the timing is perfect.

Having said that, we hope that readers partake of our games page and that it brings people some joy, as well as frustration (otherwise the puzzles are too easy).

Let us know what you think. Feedback is always welcome.

Send letters to The Creemore Echo, 3 Caroline Street West, Box 1219, Creemore, ON, L0M 1G0, email to info@creemore.com or drop them off at the Echo's Office.

Letters must include the sender's full name and phone number (phone number won't be published). All letters submitted to the Echo are not necessarily published. The Echo reserves the right to edit letters for length and clarity.

Memories of our bank

It is really sad, first to not have a great bank in Creemore anymore but even sadder to think that a group of people want to see it torn down.

The bank building was so well constructed, and of all the years I worked there it was well maintained.

I remember when the big front window was removed. It was difficult for us. We felt like we couldn't be part of the activities on Mill Street.

It was done to provide better night deposit access for business customers and of course the green machine.

The only thing about the building that gave us great stress was the heating system. One cold winter, I remember us all working with winter coats and mitts on but our customers brought in hot teas and hot chocolate to warm us.

We had a big staff of 13 people at one time and the bank was the hub of the village.

We had great staff. I remember Huck Caesar, my first manager. He always took time to talk sports with us and ask how the baseball game scores were.

Jack Hanning would come out of his office on a busy Friday night and write up passbooks for us to help keep our line-ups down.

I worked with Rick Kelly the longest. He was up for any kind of fun we suggested on our customer appreciation days. We all put in a lot of work but had fun in what we did. We all put the human element in banking.

When we were robbed the first time we realized just how important our bank was to our customers. The following day we were expecting business as usual but when the doors opened the bank was full of customers.

They had a look of concern on their faces and brought us treats. I knew they were there to see we were okay. Another time a terrible storm was brewing and manager Rick Kelly felt it unsafe to walk home so when Brenda Noble and I went to leave Glen Morby showed up in the snowplow. We had a safe ride home. I wish the bank could be used for something valuable for the village and just think, that vault would make an amazing cold room.

Linda Cockton was a TD Bank employee for about 35 years.

TD bank community consultation Dec. 9

The TD Lands Community Consultation Committee (TLC) is inviting everyone with an interest in the vitality of Creemore to join in a conversation at a public meeting on Sunday, Dec. 9 at 2 p.m. at the Station on the Green.

The meeting will be facilitated by Small, the not-for-profit arm of ERA - an award-winning architectural firm known for their work on heritage projects such as the Drake Devonshire and Toronto's Distillery District. Small has extensive experience working with rural communities to identify placebased opportunities and actions. The firm is focused on leveraging cultural heritage values and assets, in order to support liveable communities.

"The best ideas for any kind of change in the community come from the unique perspectives of people who live and work there, who understand where the community has come from, and are driven by what it can be in the future. Creemore is an extremely vibrant and engaged community, and residents have some great ideas for what they want to see in their downtown. The public meeting will be about sharing ideas to contribute to the strength of that community vision," said Heather Campbell of Small.

Participants will be talking about what's happening now in Creemore, what the biggest changes will be in the next few years and brainstorming ideas for how the TD site can be used to strengthen all of Clearview. How to enhance Mill Street, local events, entrepreneurial activity, and support local families and community groups will be key considerations.

After the Dec. 9 meeting, Small and TLC will develop a summary of the shared insights. These will be presented to the community for discussion at a second public meeting in January.

The TLC encourages everyone to attend. "The more people who participate in this public forum the better. Varied ideas and experiences from all walks - young and old, visitors, villagers and weekenders, farmers and retailers - will ensure that we have the most comprehensive understanding of this place, the people who care about it, and what we want for our community," said committee chair Sara Hershoff.

For more information about the meeting, contact Hershoff at sara@ creemore.com or 705-466-9906.

Anyone not able to attend the meeting is welcome to offer input by e-mail.

New Lowell couple installs home AED

by Trina Berlo

Having seen first hand the importance of a timely response when it comes to cardiac arrest, New Lowell residents Brittany and Justin McLeod have installed an automated external defibrillator (AED) at their house for everyone to use.

"We thought it would be a good idea," said Brittany. "We live on the 5th Concession of New Lowell so it takes a bit of time if EMS or [the fire department] were to come to our area, or at least our street and back in to the subdivision... Seeing as defibrillators are best used within the first four to six minutes of someone going into cardiac arrest."

Both Brittany and Jason are sevenyear members of the Clearview fire department. The fire department carries defibrillators in their vehicles, and Brittany works as a trainer for Action First Aid, the company that sells the defibrillators.

The defibrillator is already installed and ready for use. It is mounted on the west side of the house, outdoors in a special temperature regulated case, easily accessible to everyone in the neighbourhood. They initiated a fundraiser through their Neighbourhood Defibrillator Program and have raised $3,366 toward the $5,000 goal, which covers the cost of installing the "Save Station" including the device and the box that allows it to remain outside during all four seasons.

"The whole point of doing the whole outside Save Station is so that anybody

"I want everyone to have that fighting chance," she said. "I want the community to be a safer community and I want my neighbours to have that peace of mind."

can access it because many schools have defibrillators, local buildings have these but once they are locked for the night, when people go home from work nobody can access them so we want to make sure they are accessible all the time," said Brittany.

"They are very user friendly. Anybody can use them without having training."

As soon as the machine is turned on, it prompts the user to follow voice commands, which talk the user through the whole process.

Brittany said 80 per cent of cardiac arrests happen near the home and every minute that goes by without use of an AED means 10 per cent less chance of survival. And time is of the essence, she said, because by the time people realize that someone is in cardiac arrest, usually four minutes have already passed by the time the initial 911 call is made.

When a defibrillator is used, their chance of survival goes up to 60-80 per cent.

"I want everyone to have that fighting chance," she said. "I want the community to be a safer community and I want my neighbours to have that peace of mind."

The McLeods are hosting an information and training session for the AED at the fire hall in New Lowell at 1:30 p.m. on Sunday, December 2. They will cover the location of the Save Station, provide a crash course on CPR and demonstrate how easy it is to use a defibrillator. People of all ages are welcome.

Clearview council votes in pay increase

by Trina Berlo

In their final act, Clearview council has approved a pay increase for councillors, beginning in January.

A special meeting was called Tuesday afternoon to consider council remuneration, the week before the new council is sworn in on Dec. 3.

Four councillors-elect were invited to sit at the council table (but not given a vote) for the discussion, and a subsequent in-camera session regarding "labour relations or employee negotiations."

They heard from consultant Marianne Love who said Clearview has fallen short in two key areas – salary and benefits – and that the pay gap has only widened since her last review in 2012.

Based on salary alone, Love found the mayor's pay is 12.7 per cent below the 60th percentile, whereas the deputy mayor's pay is 7.7 per cent below and council members' pay is 3.6 per cent below.

Also taken into consideration was the removal of a 1/3 tax-free treatment for mayors and councillors as set out in the 2017 federal budget, and that the municipality doesn't offer any health benefits to council members.

Outgoing mayor Christopher Vanderkruys spoke in support of increasing salaries, specifically for the position of mayor and deputy mayor, saying they should make more than councillors.

"Going into the higher percentile is more reality for those two positions," he said. "It's easy for an outgoing mayor to say, and I'm not trying to give Doug a bonus or anything, but I do think it's warranted."

"It's a full-time job with part-time pay," said mayorelect Doug Measures, adding that council reps can be stopped anywhere, anytime to talk about an issue.

"I think we are doing the right thing. It's respectable to go with the 60th percentile," said Measures. He was insistent that in the next term of council the review is done earlier in the final year of the term.

To bring Clearview up to the 60th percentile of comparators used in her analysis; offset the removal of 1/3 tax-free; and provide a Health Care Spending Account of $1,250 per year per council member with premiums paid by the municipality, Love recommended the mayor be paid $36,778 per year, the deputy mayor be paid $27,986 and councillors be paid $21,130. The changes will cost the taxpayer an extra $36,579, approximately. Council approved the almost 17 per cent increase.

Outgoing councillor Kevin Elwood voiced concern about the impact on the taxpayer and the public perception.

"The public... yikes! It's quite a bit all at once," he said. "The effect on the taxpayer is significant in the overall budget... That accumulative effect is what concerns me."

Many councillors spoke in favour of the increase, some for the reason that the municipality not fall further behind.

Outgoing councillor Shawn Davidson pointed out that when council approved an increase in 2009, there hadn't been a review since 2003.

"We took a big hit but people accepted it," he said, adding they opted out of benefits because they had just approved a nine-year pay increase.

"We have to look beyond ourselves. We are setting up for the future," said outgoing councillor Deborah Bronée. "We are always saying we would like to get younger people in."

She said as long as council is open and transparent about it, she believes the public will accept it.

Thom Paterson, representative for the Creemore area, said the expectation is that with better pay, there is an increase in service.

"The expectation is that we do more," he said. "The idea is not coming to a meeting, it's what is done between meetings."

In addition to council voting to increase pay to match the 60th percentile of the market survey and offset the removal of 1/3 tax-free, they will adjust the base pay for elected officials annually at the same rate of management and non-union staff; adopt a practice of conducting a market review during the last year of the term of council in the first quarter; approve the health care spending account of $1,250 per year per council member, with premiums paid by the municipality.

While in-camera, council reviewed pay equity and salary compensation for staff members. All changes will be part of the 2019 public budget process.

Dufferin Community Foundation launches

For some guests, the launch of the Dufferin Community Foundation was the realization of a 20-year dream. For everyone, it was an afternoon of storytelling and inspiration.

About 100 dignitaries, founders, corporate circle members, philanthropists and local charities shared the excitement of Dufferin joining the ranks of close to 200 Canadian communities who use the "power of the many" through charitable community foundations to enrich the lives of their current and future citizens.

Event sponsors, Paul and Joan Waechter, joined the board of directors to greet guests and talk about the goals of the foundation, while enjoying the autumn beauty and hospitality of the Adamo Estate Winery in Hockley Valley.

"The Community Foundation movement is one of the most dynamic vehicles for philanthropy that exists in Canada today," said Tim MacDonald, a founding board member and the honorary chair of the Stratford Perth Community Foundation. "They can connect people who care with projects that matter in all of our communities."

MacDonald – an accomplished business executive and 2018 Order of Canada recipient for his leadership in business and community initiatives in southwestern Ontario, which have contributed to the economic and social vitality of the region – shared valuable stories from the early days of the Stratford Perth Community Foundation's journey.

"If you have money, you need to know us; if you need money, you need to know us," MacDonald is known to say.

From its modest beginnings in 2004, the Stratford Perth Community Foundation has built endowment funds totalling $4.4 million and has granted close to $800,000 to local charities.

The lessons learned included the need for conversations with community and business leaders, the value of stories about real lives touched by philanthropy and the power of networking with neighbouring communities. And, above all, the patience to build endowment funds so that grants can continue in perpetuity. In offering to share any advice Dufferin might need, MacDonald put the launch in perspective: "You're already doing some of the things that worked for us. Congratulations to Dufferin!"

Gord Gallaugher, chair of the Dufferin Community Foundation

Linda Arki photo, Silent Muse Productions

Gord Gallaugher, Chair of the Dufferin Community Foundation, introduces board members MaryAnn Lowry (Vice Chair), Steve Doney (Treasurer), Laura Ryan, and Joan Waechter at the Sept. 30 launch of the Dufferin Community Foundation.

Board, shared his own story of getting involved.

"Like most people, especially in my younger years, I did not really think much about the charitable sector, what they did, or how they were funded," he said. "After I became involved on a municipal council in Dufferin, I started to get my eyes opened to the valuable work that was done in our community by local charities, and how they struggled to find funding to keep going every year. I was intrigued by what I had heard about community foundations."

A few years ago, the timing was right to take on the challenge of creating a source of long-term funding for charities offering support to Dufferin residents. Headwaters Communities in Action (HCIA), a charitable organization working locally with the sector to promote collaboration and managing specific projects, helped support the work of a steering committee.

The committee did its research homework, raised some preliminary funds for operating expenses, and put the pieces in place for incorporation and a formal Board structure. The board of directors, formalized in February 2018, is comprised of Gallaugher; MaryAnn Lowry (vice chair), Steve Doney (treasurer), Joan Waechter and Laura Ryan. Shirley Boxem is the board secretary. They have all taken on speaking, fundraising, writing, financial, administrative and organizational tasks as unpaid volunteers to keep operating expenses in check. The board recently launched www.dufferincommunityfoundation.ca to provide detailed information on the foundation and how to support it.

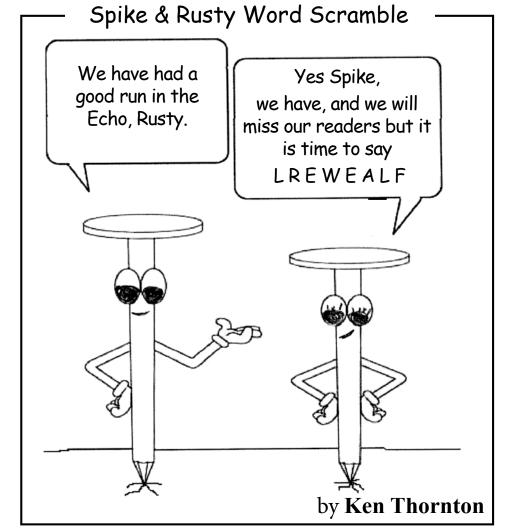

A highlight of the launch was the presentation of the foundation's first 'mini-grants' to Dufferin-based charitable projects that address needs in human services, healthy living, economic development and education. In total, these projects span all age groups. What distinguished them, according to the grant convenor, MaryAnn Lowry, were, "the legacy factors in building skills or a pay-forward mindset, best practices in project management, and the leverage from volunteers and partner collaborations."

The three winning applicants, from the fifteen worthy charities who responded, told their stories and noted the impact that an extra $1,000 will make on their project budgets.

On behalf of the Town of Orangeville, Shannon and Valerie McGrady representing Bravery Park received a cheque from Jacqueline Demczur, a partner at Carters Professional Corporation in its Orangeville office. Carters is one of the foundation's Corporate Circle members.

Maureen Riedler, Executive Director of Hospice Dufferin, and Helen Trilesky, a client, received their grant for the Volunteer Visiting Program from Cheryl Greenwood and Amie Zukowski on behalf of Greenwood Aggregates, the foundation's first Corporate Circle member.

Jim Preyde, President of the Dufferin Hi-Lands Bruce Trail Club, a member club of the Bruce Trail Conservancy, received a grant for the Conservancy's local School Outreach Program from Paul and Joan Waechter.

So far this year (2018), alcohol and/or drugs were a factor in the deaths of 39 people on OPP-patrolled roads.

From January 1 to mid-October 2018, (the OPP's latest data) the OPP laid more than 6,700 impaired driving charges across the province, 283 of which were impaired by drugs.

Crevier	2-2-0
Cass	1-2-1
Neelin	1-3-0
Baylis	0-3-1

From the Hack: Nov. 16 – The high scorers of the evening were Team McArthur with 12 points and Team Bell with 11 points.

Nov. 23 – Jim's Belles (Jazmin, Lisa and Amy) are undefeated going into game 5. Team Fuller (Gord, Catherine, Rodger Giffen and Carol Whitley) is hot on their heels! High scorers were Teams Meulendyk and Bell, both with 9 points. Stay tuned....

Daytime	(win-loss-tie)
Loranger	7-2-0
Coulter	6-2-1
Bell	6-4-0
Steed	4-5-1
McDougall	3-7-0
Lambert	2-8-0

From the Hack: Isobel had to step up to the skip position for Team Bell, due to the absence of Jim. So it was, in essence, a McDougall team versus a McDougall team! The front end for Isobel, placed their rocks perfectly in front of the house. Mary, as vice, and Isobel threw excellent takeout and draw shots, leaving Bill, and team scratching their heads and saying ... what? Team Bell won easily. (I can confirm that despite the outcome, Bill did give Isobel a ride home! And I think he had to make the afternoon tea!). Team Steed bested Team Lambert, and Team Coulter had no problem beating Team Loranger. Good curling everyone!
