Fire displaces residents of The Belmont

by Trina Berlo
Residents watched from the windows of the church across the street as firefighters worked to control a fire at The Belmont Wednesday morning.

Many still in their pyjamas, most of the 24 residents of the independent living seniors residence in Stayner were at the church awaiting transportation to a hotel, an effort coordinated by the County of Simcoe.

Three residents had been transported to the hospital in Collingwood with minor injuries, said the County's Paramedic Services acting platoon supervisor Leah Emmerton. She could not speak to the nature of their injuries.

All stations responded to the fire at 7232 Highway 26 just after 9 a.m. Clearview Fire Chief Scott Davison said firefighters were on scene all day working to fully extinguish the fire which will be investigated by the Office of the Fire Marshal.

On Wednesday firefighters could be seen working on both the north and south side of the facility.

Owner Jon Wells said an accidental fire started in the kitchen. He said fully functioning alarms sounded and sprinklers were engaged, all systems having been inspected and passed.

He said residents were being transported to a hotel in Midland, where they could all be together and continue to be cared for. The intention is to move them to Collingwood when accommodations become available.

"It's a hard day," said manager Karin Brady. "I'm proud of my staff. They know the drill and they knew what to do."

She said the fire is devastating because a lot of hard work has been put into renovating the home, which opened in 2024 in the building that formerly housed Huronia Guest Home.

Brady said the home was almost at capacity having just completed the renovations.

"Our heart and soul has gone into the building," said Brady. "It was better than it had ever been."

Firefighters worked throughout the day Wednesday to fully extinguish a fire at an independent living home in Stayner.

"It is well insured and it will be even better than it was before when it re-opens," said Wells.

Brady said the community has really stepped up to support the residents.

"It's a home. We ran it as a home," said Brady. "My heart is crushed."

A few pets perished in the fire, said Brady, adding that firefighters just couldn't get to them.

Davison said as the last truck was clearing the Belmont fire at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday when all stations were dispatched to another structure fire on 12/13 Sideroad Sunnidale.

"The home sustained significant damage but was limited by a quick fire attack," said Davison.

The house fire has been deemed accidental, he said. There were no injuries but three people have been displaced until the home can be restored.

Stewie Patterson

Remembering Stewie

by Trina Berlo
Stewart Patterson didn't wake up on Saturday, having died at the age of 66 of an apparent heart attack through the night. His death was a shock to his friends and caregivers who had spoken to him the day before, when he seemed to be in good health.

Stewie, as he was known to most, had lived in Creemore for decades, a regular on the main street where he would visit shops or sit on a bench, often with a coffee in hand, chatting to passersby. He seemed to know everyone.

Stewie talked a lot about his mother and life on the farm, a blend of fact and fiction.

He had recently moved to Collingwood but was in Creemore for the Santa Claus parade, having been ferried by his old pal Brian Doran.

"He was helping me direct traffic but I think he was more here for the social side," said Doran. "He was actually causing a traffic problem because everyone would stop to talk to him."

Like most people, Doran said he met Stewie on the street.

"He'd tell everyone the same stories, just a little bit different each time," he said.

Stewie wove tales, fact and fiction

“He knew every dog’s name and he’d pet every dog he’d ever seen,” said Doran. “He could drive down a road and the next day he’d tell you who lived on that road. It was pretty amazing, some of the observations he’d come up with.”

Stewie had rented a small house on Collingwood Street from Bob Ransier for 23 years.

“It takes a village to raise a Stewie, that’s what I tell people,” he said.

“There was a lot of truth to the stories he told, just that they were fictitious,” he said, recounting how Stewie knew the names of all horses and racetracks. “He would tell you stories that you’d believe them all if you didn’t know him.”

In addition to some kind of cognitive disability, Stewie had Parkinson’s disease.

He grew up in foster care and later went to live with a family near Singhampton, where he developed his farming skills.

He liked being out on a job with Ransier, mending fences, bush hogging and operating the backhoe.

“He was well loved and he was a good worker,” said Ransier.

He said people regularly dropped off clothing, boots and supplies. His house was equipped with a microwave so Stewie could heat up meals that people cooked for him. Ransier said his freezer was stocked with all kinds of meals ready to be heated up.

In his younger years, Ransier said, Stewie would hitchhike to Stayner to visit his mother, who died in 2012.

After leaving Ransier’s house, Stewie stayed with Ginny Smith and her family while she helped him secure housing for him with E3 services in Collingwood. The intent was for him to come back to town if he could find something he could afford.

Smith said she is grateful to E3 for helping him find a place to live, providing meals and getting him to appointments, etc...

“They were all very invested, and really caring with him, and worked very hard to advocate for him,” said Smith.

“He was doing great. He reconnected with a bunch of people he knew from when he’d lived in Collingwood before. He gave staff a real hard time and laughed about it every day,” she said, chuckling.

Smith said he had a great roommate and he was doing well. His financial affairs and services were in order.

“Things had really turned around for the best for him. It’s very heartbreaking,” said Smith. “I just want to thank those people who, when he lost his home, stepped up and helped. There were quite a few people who provided the basics like clothing and food for him.”

She said Stewie was quite pleased that Lorna May was still bringing him sandwiches and liquorice to his new home in Collingwood. May saw Stewie every Friday, with deliveries of his favourite egg salad sandwiches and treats from the food bank.

Interim tax bylaw passed

Clearview Township council has passed an interim tax bylaw and a temporary borrowing bylaw. Treasurer Kelly McDonald says the interim tax bylaw allows the township to bill the first two tax installments, totalling 50 per cent of last year’s final tax bill while the budget package is being finalized.

She describes the interim borrowing bill as the township’s overdraft protection.

Mayor Doug Measures noted that while the township passes a temporary borrowing bylaw each year, it has never been necessary to actually access the funds.

“It’s just there as a contingency, in case we have to spend money while we wait for tax revenues to come in,” he said.

The 2026 Clearview Township budget is the first budget under the province’s Strong Mayor Powers. Measures says he values the contributions of staff, and the public in developing a budget that is not only fiscally responsible but also addresses the current needs and future of the township.

“This budget is the result of careful planning and collaboration with our staff, council members, and citizens. Our goal is to keep tax impacts modest while ensuring Clearview Township is prepared for future challenges and continues to deliver the high quality services residents expect,” said Measures.

The 2026 budget includes a blended increase of 2.09 per cent.

Police are asking for the public’s assistance to identify the culprit who stole cash from a self-serve honey stand on North Nottawasaga Concession 6 in Clearview Township on Dec. 27. The theft occurred shortly after 8 p.m., and was captured on surveillance video. Anyone with information about this incident is asked to contact Huronia West OPP at 1-888-310-1122, referencing occurrence E251733612.

COLUMN

The other side of Year of the Woman Farmer

Let's start off the New Year right by recognizing the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations' declaration that 2026 is the International Year of the Woman Farmer.

Such declarations are a time of celebration. FAO says women have a central role in household food security and nutrition. In 2021, agri-food systems employed 40 per cent of working women globally, nearly equal to men.

Globally, says the FAO, women farmers work in diverse roles across agri-food systems and come from all backgrounds: young and older women, Indigenous women, women in local communities, women with disabilities and refugee and displaced women.

It further describes them as smallholder producers, peasants, agricultural labourers, fishers and fish workers, beekeepers, pastoralists, processors, traders, women in agricultural sciences, rural entrepreneurs, traditional knowledge holders, and more – whether in formal or informal work, with or without land ownership.

For its part, Canada has nearly 80,000 female farm operators, a figure which represents 30 per cent of all Canadian farmers.

"Women in agriculture today are highly educated and driven, with strong business acumen," according to a report on women in agriculture from Farm Credit Canada (FCC), the country's biggest agricultural lender.

"They are well equipped to foster innovation and accelerate new methods, tools, and technologies on the farm," it says. "At a time when productivity growth in Canadian agriculture is stagnating, leveraging their skills and entrepreneurial spirit will reap significant economic benefits."

The number of women farm operators in Canada has grown by about 2,000 in the past decade. That sounds like an upbeat trend.

But not so, says FCC. It claims the trend is largely explained by men leaving the sector, not by more women joining. Farm consolidations and an aging farm population have reduced the total number of farm operators across Canada over time, with the number of men falling faster than the number of women. So, while the proportion of women farmers has been steadily on the rise, the actual number of women in farming has not been growing by much, it says.

The FAO describes women's contributions as undervalued. It says their working conditions are often more precarious – irregular, informal, part-time, low-paid, labour-intensive and highly vulnerable. Women

County accepts applications for Experience Simcoe County Partnership Fund

The County of Simcoe is now accepting applications for its 2026 Experience Simcoe County Partnership Fund. This year, County Council has allocated $400,000 to fund tourism-focused and culture-driven initiatives that focus on attracting visitors to the region.

The 2026 funding will support and enhance tourism offerings across Simcoe County by:

- Investing in initiatives that increase awareness and appreciation of, and access to, Simcoe County's diverse tourism, cultural, and recreation offerings.
- Fostering partnerships and collaboration among tourism stakeholders, municipalities, and organizations to strengthen the regional tourism ecosystem.
- Supporting innovative, inclusive, and accessible programming that improves the quality and appeal of visitor experiences.
- Contributing to the county's overall economic health by stimulating tourism-related spending and promoting Simcoe County as a desirable destination.
- Aligning funded projects with the Experience Simcoe County work plan and strategic priorities, including destination marketing, product development, and workforce development.
- Enhancing tourism experiences that promote accessibility, inclusivity, and engagement for older adults, fostering social connection, active living, and lifelong learning within the community.

"Tourism and culture are vital to Simcoe County's identity and economy," said Warden Basil Clarke.

"Through the Experience Simcoe County Partnership Fund, we're proud to support creative, collaborative initiatives that showcase the best of our region, attract visitors, and strengthen our communities. This program is about investing in experiences that make Simcoe County a destination of choice for all."

Up to $10,000 in funding is available for marketing, public art and beautification, trails and cycling infrastructure, and workforce development initiatives, while up to $20,000 can be requested for signage projects. Eligible organizations may submit a maximum of one application for funding by the Friday, February 13 deadline.

All applications are reviewed by the County of Simcoe's Grant Task Force, which consists of appointed members of county council and is supported by county staff. Funding will be distributed amongst successful applicants based on their alignment with the program's requirements and objectives, and the project's overall benefit to the entire region.

Program details and applications guidelines can be found at experience.simcoe.ca/resources/grant. Prospective applicants can contact Tourism Simcoe County staff by email at tourism@simcoe.ca with any questions.

Baker takes unrefined approach to contest

by Trina Berlo

You can have your cake and eat it too, says Tracy Ventresca, contender for the 2025 Greatest Baker title.

Ventresca is competing in the quarter-finals with hope of winning one of two titles – people’s choice or critic’s pick.

To win the former, the New Lowell resident is seeking votes from the community. To win the latter, she will have to catch the attention of Bake from Scratch magazine editor-in-chief Brian Hart Hoffman.

Ventresca, inspired to cook healthy foods for her two-year-old daughter, switched to unrefined, wholesome, local ingredients.

Ventresca is competing for a two-page spread in the magazine and $10,000 in prize money.

At home with a toddler, Ventresca, a real estate lawyer, said she is getting back into some of the hobbies she used to love, like baking.

“I’ve started scrutinizing labels more,” said Ventresca. “I’m trying to push for the platform that you can eat food that’s unrefined but it’s just as good.”

She opts for less processed, chemical-free ingredients.

She hopes to use the magazine spread to talk about clean recipes.

Ventresca said she has been baking

Tracy Ventresca with daughter Mia for 20 years and makes her own bread and ice cream. She says you can have all that stuff, and cake too, “but don’t let it kill you.”

Voting in the quarter-finals ends on Wednesday, Jan. 21. Votes can be cast on Facebook or by donation to the Andrew McDonough B+ Foundation.

DND radar petition closes Jan 23

by Trina Berlo
A petition opposing the Department of National Defence's (DND) plan to establish a radar receive site in Clearview Township will close on Jan. 23.

With 1,470 online signatures and another 700 collected on hard copies so far, Terri Jackman says she is pretty happy with the response.

She and Rachel Brooks have been leading a campaign to raise awareness about an Arctic Over-the-Horizon Radar (A-OTHR) receive site that stands to threaten agricultural land and their way of life.

DND has purchased 163 hectares of vacant property in Kawartha Lakes for a permanent transmit site and 288 hectares of agricultural land at 2225 15/16 Sideroad Sunnidale to be used as a preliminary receive site. The land is roughly half the ideal size for a receive site so the search for land continues. Since the acquisition, DND has been surveying area landowners to determine their interest in selling, leading speaker after speaker at two fall public info sessions to inquire whether their land will eventually be targeted for expropriation.

DND continues to assess options for the remaining permanent transmit site and two permanent receive sites, using up to 1,200 hectares of land.

The radar installation is a key part of a $38.6 billion initiative to modernize Canada's contribution to the North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) over the next 20 years.

A-OTHR will provide advanced early warning and long-range surveillance, enabling faster Canadian Armed Forces detection and tracking of a wide range of threats in our northern air and maritime approaches, while strengthening NORAD domain awareness in the defence of Canada and North America. It can conduct surveillance at far greater ranges than regular radar technology as it bounces radar beams off the ionosphere to see around the curvature (See 'Military' on page 10)

Coyotes and the challenge of coexistence

by Trina Berlo

Andrew Interisano is using his platform as a celebrated amateur wildlife photographer to build an understanding of how humans can better coexist with coyotes.

During the pandemic, while staying at his parents' house in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Interisano was spending a lot of time outdoors and observed the urban coyotes living there. He said he developed an understanding of their territory and habits enabling him to take the 2021 photo entitled Midnight Ramblers, which was deemed Highly Commended in the Urban Wildlife category of the Natural History Museum's 2024 Wildlife Photographer of the Year contest.

Not only did he travel to the UK for an awards gala, rubbing shoulders with the best photographers in the business, but he also got to see his photo exhibited at the Royal Ontario Museum.

"Even more cool is having it in your hometown in the ROM, where you grow up going on field trips," said Interisano. "It was such a surreal experience to have it shown in a place that I grew up going to as a kid."

Interisano, now a Mulmur resident, has since been striving to understand the relationship to rural coyotes.

"It's such a complicated issue," he said. "I feel obligated to try to educate people as much as I can."

He will be giving a fireside talk called Coyotes and the Challenge of Coexistence at the Mansfield Outdoor Centre's Pine River Café on

Midnight Ramblers by Andrew Interisano was highly commended in the urban wildlife category of the Natural History Museum's 2024 Photographer of the Year wards.

Jan. 24. The talk, supported by his photography, promises myth-busting, facts, information and no finger-pointing. Interisano said humans' relationship with coyotes is complex and his talk will endeavour to explain how European settlers developed a negative attitude towards canids, but also about displacement, human encroachment on habitat, animal behaviour, pack dynamics and some safety tips.

Interisano will illustrate how a cultural bias has been formed against coyotes. He said from religion to Little Red Riding Hood, wolves have been demonized, in contrast to Indigenous cultures where they are revered.

He said people tend to anthropomorphize coyotes when really they are just trying to survive.

"I find it surprising that people can't relate more to coyotes... They are family oriented mammals and they are the closest thing to a dog that exists," said Interisano. "I understand that there is angst and fear toward the unknown and that's why I am hoping that the more people know about coyotes, through what I post or talk about, that there is some sort of knowledge or wisdom that can be garnered from that, and we can make better decisions."

One myth that Interisano aims to bust is that coyotes lure domestic dogs. According to Coyote Watch Canada, a volunteer not-for-profit wildlife organization that advocates positive human-wildlife coexistence with a focus on canids, "Coyotes are family oriented and do not use their family members to bait or lure other animals. When a free-roaming dog chases and harasses a coyote, the coyote will flee to the safety of family members. If a dog continues pursuit, coyotes will defend their families."

Coyotes and the Challenge of Coexistence: A fireside conversation with award-winning photographer Andrew Interisano on Saturday, Jan. 24 is from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the main lodge.

Tickets cost $20 and include a printed postcard from the artist, baked goods, coffee and tea. Register at moc.campbrainregistration.com.

Closing the gender gap

farmers face systemic barriers, including limited access to land, finance, technologies, education, extension services and participation in decision-making at all levels, says the FAO.
Helping right this ship would have a significant return. It's estimated that closing the gaps between men and women in agriculture could raise global GDP by a whopping $1 trillion and reduce food insecurity for 45 million people.

In Canada, FCC says embracing the strengths and potential of women in agriculture can unlock $5 billion in economic benefits for the agriculture sector.
Leadership training is a great place to start. In December, Grain Farmers of Ontario hosted a Women's Grain Symposium in Guelph that drew 130 people. It was marketed as an opportunity for networking, professional development and leadership development, an effort that reflected FAO's emphasis for 2026.
"Throughout 2026, the International Year will move to practical work — national policies, community partnerships, research, investment and dialogue between farmers, cooperatives, governments, finance institutions, youth networks and universities," says FAO. "The goal is simple: turn commitment into practice, and practice into measurable impact."

Owen Roberts is an agricultural journalist from Guelph. He regularly visits family in Creemore.

Trivia: Which of Shakespeare's plays is the longest?

Military use of agricultural land ‘too big of sacrifice’

of the Earth.

“It’s not that we’re against the project,” said Jackman. “It’s just that we feel it’s too big a sacrifice for this land to be used for that purpose.”

Jackman and Brooks believe that existing DND land, either in Borden or Meaford, would be a viable alternative.

“If our community truly believes that this is not an appropriate location for this type of instalment and they have helpful information or contacts to share to reach out to us,” said Brooks. “I really feel that in a situation like this if the community comes together then we have a better chance to convince DND that another location would be more suitable.”

“I’m not sure people understand the implications of decisions like this, where it’s impossible to replace the farmland that’s going to be displaced by projects like this and that our longterm food security will be if we continue to do this,” said Jackman.

They fear it will set a precedent, and open doors to possible expansion.

“And the process of how they go about doing that, which has proven to be a very unsettling process for this community,” said Jackman.

The petition, sponsored by Simcoe-Grey MP Terry Dowdall, calls on the government to stop the building of any A-OTHR site on the already purchased property; prevent future acquisition of prime farmland and the building of any A-OTHR sites on the prime farmland of Clearview Township; and to register the previously purchased property with the Ontario Farmland Trust.

In November, Dowdall spoke on the topic in the House of Commons saying, “Mr Speaker, residents of Simcoe Grey are proud to be home of Canadian Forces Base Borden. They are also proud farmers. So when DND revealed that is secretly bought over 700 acres of prime farmland to build a radar site residents were shocked, now they’re concerned. After DND started contacting residents directly asking them to sell their land because it needs thousands more acres. They wont sell. They’ve been on this land for generations. Will the government expropriate their land?... We talk every day in this place about food security in Canada. This government says it is taking action. That action shouldn’t be turning 4000 acres of Canada’s best farmland into a radar site. Residents support investments in Canada’s national security but they call on the minister to select a radar site which doesn’t sacrifice food security in the process.”

Dowdall told The Echo that the e-petition and hard copies will be presented in installments, giving him more opportunity to speak to the issue in the House of Commons, adding that with each presentation the government is required to respond within 45 days.

He said the petition will help and the more people who are aware of the issue the better.

“What we’ve said all along and what the residents are saying is we’re not necessarily against the technology and we’re certainly supportive of our military,” said Dowdall. “We just don’t think this is the best location when you’re trying to balance national security and food security.”

The petition is online at www.ourcommons.ca under e-6829 (national defence and military operations).
