Wind turbines project stopped

By Kristi Green

A wind turbine project planned for the northwest corner of Clearview has been cancelled.

This week, the Ontario Power Association (OPA) confirmed to the Echo that the Skyway 124 Wind Energy Project, which was to be located between Singhampton and Maple Valley, has been terminated.

John Cannella, Media Relations Specialist at the OPA would not provide reasons for the termination, citing confidentiality issues, even though the OPA's contract with Skyway is no longer in force.

However, Jan Minduik, member of a local citizen's group opposing the project, speculated in an email this week that Skyway abandoned the project because of the high cost of connecting to the grid and because the original proposal of 15 turbines had been reduced to only three.

Derek Tennant, President of Skyway, said the termination was the result of a "mutual agreement with the OPA." He would not elaborate.

In 2009, Skyway proposed erecting 15 industrial wind turbines – which it later reduced to three – along the 11th Concession of Nottawasaga, east of County Road 124.

The proposal has been fought by a Singhampton community group since the beginning. "I am ecstatic," said Minduik, who is a member of the group.

The group believes that wind turbines create health problems, reduce property values, destroy the landscape and increase hydro costs.

By distributing pamphlets, holding meetings and hosting guest speakers, its members sought to educate residents of Clearview about the disadvantages of the proposed turbines.

"Our community has been an unwilling host to industrial wind turbines ever since 2009. We fought long and hard as a group to make sure our community did not become invaded with industrial wind turbines," Minduik said.

A big heart full of stories

By Brad Holden

The Creemore Echo office is a public space, and during my time as Editor of the newspaper it was always a treat to talk to new arrivals to the area, who inevitably made their way into the office to get the scoop on the community. These people had usually already had a look at the Echo, and it was fun to hear their fresh opinions of our little labour of love.

Sylvia Gale's "Creemore Big Heart Seniors" column always came up in those conversations, and without exception people could be divided into one of two camps – those who immediately understood why we gave such prominence to the seniors' euchre report, and those who said, "Great paper, but what's the deal with the column with all the card scores?"

To those in the first camp, I always said, "Welcome to Creemore. You are going to love this town." And to those in the second, I said, "Keep reading, because that column about the card scores is the single-most important piece of real estate in the whole newspaper."

Rural Ontario is full of stories of the past, and there's a distinct way in which those stories are told. It's full of humour,

A good chuckle

a tad self-deprecating and as nostalgic about the hardships as it is about the good times. Sylvia Gale was a master of the form. The lady could spin a yarn. Many a Thursday morning at The Creemore Echo office, as Sara, Georgi and I were taking the paper through its first round of proofreading, we'd all get to page 5 at about the same time. There'd be a chuckle or two, the laughter would spread and someone would inevitably say, "Oh boy, Sylvia's is good this week."

There were tales of schoolyard whimsy, ladies' baseball games and neighbours helping neighbours (there was a lot of that). Someone was always getting a flashy new car and parading it up and down Mill Street. There were trips to Wasaga Beach with all the town's young people crammed into the back of a farm truck, there were massive blizzards and there were practical jokes. There were lots of reminders of a time when people didn't have quite so much stuff, when dinners out were a once-a-year treat and when Christmas gifts were extra special because there were only a few.

I was lucky to receive these stories in my email inbox every Wednesday morning (usually sent in the wee hours of the previous night because Sylvia was a night owl and almost always sent her column in two or three parts, and because she never did trust her computer enough to type the whole thing out before sending it off – things go missing, you know!). I was even luckier to receive regular phone calls from Sylvia on Wednesday afternoons, after she had caught a typo or two. I had usually found them by then, but I didn't mind, because Sylvia was a blast to talk to on the phone. She had an immense talent for putting stories down on the page, but let me tell you, it paled in comparison to her gift of the gab.

Sylvia had her share of health problems over the past few years, and it was always my greatest fear that the magic of the Big Heart Seniors column would someday disappear from The Creemore Echo. "You know, Sylvia, you could take a break for a little while," I would tell her when she was obviously suffering, though I always hoped she would say no. And she always did. That column came in every week, and each time Creemore was given another precious glimpse into its past. When I heard of her passing this week, it was with a real sense of loss. I lost a friend, and this community lost one of its treasures.

My sincere condolences to Warren and all of Sylvia's family on the passing of a truly special woman. Sylvia's Big Heart Seniors column was the heart and soul of the The Creemore Echo and I am honoured to have worked with her for the time that I did. May her stories of "the way things used to be" live on in her absence. She will be greatly missed.

Plans to "connect" two schools

By Kristi Green

Creemore's senior public school will get two new kindergarten classrooms plus renovations to the library and gymnasium as part of a proposed threeyear plan to prepare for full-day kindergarten, which was unveiled at a School Council meeting earlier this week.

The senior site at 240 Collingwood Street will need to be renovated to accommodate an increase in student numbers due to the closure of the junior site at 22 Caroline Street West effective next summer and the arrival of full-day kindergarten in September 2014.

Simcoe County District School Board Trustee Caroline Smith presented the "concept floor plan" to a group of 15 parents at the meeting.

The School Board does not make its building plans public to protect the safety of its students and staff members from intruders.

There are three parts to the plan: phase one will see two kindergarten classrooms added by fall 2014. In phase two, the library will be renovated and in phase three the gymnasium will be enlarged, Smith told the group.

The renovations will likely necessitate the use of one or two portable classrooms for one or two years, as well as mixed-grade classrooms, said Principal Heather Birchall.

Some parents expressed concern when they learned the renovated gym would no longer have a stage. Some discussed the need to redesign the play area around the school space so that younger children would be separated from older children during recess.

Other parents wished to preserve history by relocating the historic bell from the primary site to the senior site. "Creemore is a community where the same families have lived in the area for generations," said Smith, acknowledging that the Board will take all of these requests into account.

Smith encouraged Birchall to send a "wishlist" of parents' requests to the Superintendent of Facility Services, John Dance, by December.

"NCPS has over 100 students fewer than it did 10 years ago," said Dance. "Now they don't fill the Creemore site and we barely have the classes to fill the senior site."

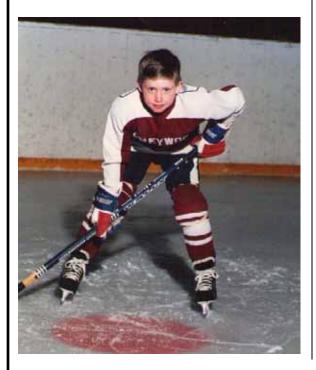

Currently, there are 80 students enrolled in kindergarten and Grades 1 and 2 at the junior site, but only 60 are present at any one time because kindergarten is only half-day. The junior site has a capacity of 135. There are 121 students in the senior site

"We haven't lost students – they aren't being born," said Smith, referring to Clearview's declining population. "There is a concern that the numbers may drop more before they rise again."

Parents agreed the two buildings contribute to a feeling of disconnectedness between students, staff members and parents. They said it was inefficient for teachers to travel between the sites to teach or share equipment such as cameras and iPads. Even the school buses have to come to two different school buildings, added one parent.

"The Creemore site is a lovely old building but it's hard to maintain, hard to keep warm and it's not accessible," said Dance.

Michael Tupling Memorial Hockey Tournament

The third annual Michael Tupling Memorial Tournament will be held on November  $22^{nd}$  and  $23^{rd}2013$  at the Honeywood arena. ### EDITORIAL

I've spent the past while talking with local veterans about their wartime experiences. While it is my job as a "cold-blooded journalist" to ask questions, the human in me has a hard time of it sometimes.

Asking people you barely know about painful experiences isn't something I'd recommend. But for those of us who are lucky enough to have never experienced a war, it's important to hear these stories before they're gone.

Remembering is something we are all doing here at the Echo with the news of Sylvia Gale's passing. Sylvia sure knew how to remember. Her columns were current events, community history and personal stories all in one.

I only knew Sylvia for a couple of months, but I'd been a fan of her column before that. I enjoyed her energetic way of speaking when we talked on the phone. And I really, really liked it when she called me "gal."

Thank you, veterans, and thank you, Sylvia, for sharing your stories with us.

It's important to remember so we can go on.

LETTER ARA review

Dear Editor,

Last week the Ontario government released its report on the Aggregate Resources Act (ARA) review. The review was a hard-won outcome of the "Stop the Mega Quarry" battle fought by Ontarians to prevent 2,400 acres of prime farmland near Shelburne from being turned into a limestone quarry. Outrage over the proposed destruction of such a massive quantity of productive class 1 farmland forced McGuinty to promise the ARA review as part of his October 2011 election campaign. Hearings were held the following summer with government, industry, affiliates, watchdogs and grassroots groups. The review was comprehensive and brought many issues to light. Then government was prorogued.

In April 2013, the Wynne government re-initiated the review and the report was written. The report lists 38 recommendations, most of which affirm the status quo. In other words, prime farmland and source water are no closer to being protected. This is a serious problem.

We need a commitment from our government to make fresh food and clean water a priority for Ontarians both today and for future generations. Please ask your MPP to prioritize food and water first.

Donna Baylis, Dunedin

LETTER Dairy farmers can compete

Dear Editor,

Recently, I was invited as a guest of the Simcoe County Milk Committee to what was believed to be a private meeting with the Simcoe Grey MP, Dr. Kellie Leitch, regarding the Canada-European Union trade agreement and how it would affect Canadian Agriculture. Having devoted my entire working career to serving the farmers of Simcoe County, I have a vested interest in their welfare.

I knew every farmer in that meeting with the exception of one who identified himself as a beef farmer from Duntroon, saying he was there to assist Dr. Leitch. This is the same individual who had a letter published in the Friday, October 29 edition of your paper. I must take issue with the highly selective reporting of the meeting by Mr. Dick Corner.

As many of the details of the Comprehensive Economic Trade Agreement had not yet been released, there were many questions. Having now read the 44-page document, there are many more questions, as details may take up to two years to finalize. As Mr. Corner stated, there were concerns about the loss of 2.5% of the market regarding the additional import of cheese. Dr. Leitch explained that cheese will also flow to Europe from Canada, tariff-free; something that was never mentioned in the press reports. The Harper Government has plans to compensate any farmer for loss of income up to the year 2020, and they are so sure that the increase in market will more than compensate for the additional cheese imports that they do not expect to pay out one dollar. Who knew that the EU agreement would open huge markets for Canadian dairy products?

The dairy farmers in this meeting voiced very real and thoughtful concerns. To her credit, Dr. Leitch took notes and promised to get back to the group with answers. One of the concerns was regarding nontariff trade barriers. The increase in exports of beef and pork could potentially have great benefit to Canadian producers. However, if imports are barred because Canadian animals are not fed diets exclusively of non-GMO feeds, this will be of no benefit whatsoever.

The presence of Mr. Corner at that meeting and the subsequent rant against supply management in his letter to Ontario Farmer questions the commitment of the Harper Government to supply management. The supply-managed commodities have brought economic stability to rural Canada. They have been the only sectors that have not required government help for survival. Thirty years ago, there were over 100 hog farms in Simcoe with sows. Now, there are three. Most of my beef clients need two off-farm incomes to help them remain viable.

Free trade must be fair trade. The number one line in the EU budget is the Common Agricultural Policy agricultural subsidies, which consumes 47% of the total budget (2010 figures). Canadian farmers are industrious, hardworking and innovators. They can compete with anyone on a level playing field.

Dr. Tim Henshaw, Minesing

A daughter's letter to her Mom, Sylvia Gale

By Laurie Rowe

So, it's 11:30 pm on Tuesday, November 5 and I realize this would be the time Mom would be frantically trying to get the Seniors news typed up and emailed up to the Echo.

Thus began her weekly fight with the computer to make it "send" and "save," and hopefully prevent Warren from an early morning trip uptown with a hard copy in hand. I always had this vision of the Echo staff – one at the door to grab the handwritten Seniors news from Warren and run it over to the other staff member who was crouched over the computer ready to type frantically to make that deadline!

This was a deadline Mom managed to make week after week, even when she was so tired. That took perseverance.

A few years ago, us kids adopted the moniker "The Wicked Westerners" to confuse Mom as to just who was responsible for the latest wee prank... like the time we took Mom's old ragged, hot-pink shirt that she had worn thin and stuffed it into a milk carton, filled it full of water and then froze it! She ended up making her firstever conference call to try to figure out which "hellion" was responsible!

We also gave her the nickname "Zelda," which she thought was kinda cute. It was about two weeks later that Aunt Bridget was down reading the newspaper, and chuckled and said, "Oh, Sylvia, you have to read this 'Zelda the Witch' comic." Mom wheeled around and in a threatening voice said, "Zelda the WHAT???" We scattered!

When I was in high school trying to learn geography, she made the countries come alive with stories she had read about them. The pyramids, history of the British Royal Family, Scottish highlands, Ireland - they all became more real. She was very proud of being Irish and she passed down her love of history to her kids and grandkids, as well. Our has a degree in history and I like to think it's in thanks to "Gramma in Ontario" and her stories.

Mom taught us independence. I watched her and Aunt Joyce lay tile floor in the new upstairs bathroom at the farm, and it was only later I realized both her brothers were carpenters and could easily have done that. The girls decided it needed to be done – so tackle it, they did!

When Warren and Terry were building the house in Avening, the whole west wall of the living room was built-in bookshelves for Mom's love of books. I am not sure if any of us kids could bring ourselves to burn a book, even if it was awful.

But she seemed to have no problem with a "controlled burn" every year in the spring to burn off that west field of dead grasses. We would laugh at Grampa Jordan's comment about phoning Sylvia whenever he heard the fire trucks go by. If there was no answer, he simply gathered the troops to go fight another Avening grass fire. My cousin Heather said the other night she didn't think was that unusual that she knew how to fight a grass fire before she was old enough to attend school.

I never did like that song, "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" - it could have been us!

Growing up in the hamlet of Avening was like having lots of Moms. One time we had been sent up for an afternoon nap and next thing Mom gets a call from Gertie Weatherall across the road. All she said was, "Sylvia, what are your children doing on the veranda roof?"

Mom had the ability to laugh at herself. Mom was on home oxygen and one night she was cutting up the old worn-out hose which would be easier to put into the garbage in pieces rather than as a big coil of plastic hose. She worked away on it for a while, then called Warren to check her oxygen machine, as it didn't seem to working very well. It was about then they realized she had made a slight error in judgment and was cutting up the hose attached to her face! No wonder she was "running out of air"!

It's only now as my own kids are growing up that I realize other ball teams are not like ours in Creemore. I thought it was normal to watch my mother, my Aunt Joyce, my Aunt Brigitte and my sister all play on the same ball team. At the same time, my other sister, myself and two of my cousins were playing on the junior team. Apparently, it's a rarity for the Calgary Slow Pitch team to have a mother and daughter playing. They don't know what they are missing.

Mom was fiercely proud of each and every one of us, but she was especially proud of our brother who turned out to be a bit of a celebrity. Each time she turned on the TV and watched "Mantracker" I am sure she felt that Terry had popped in for a visit. She was his biggest fan!

She was proud to share in the accomplishments of the neighbourhood kids such as graduations and skating medals, and she worried whenever an Avening kid had been taken to hospital.

In spite of becoming more and more tired this fall, she continued to collect milk bags, gather wool scraps to pass on, put together the Casino Rama bus trip and still manage to hit every church supper within a 15-mile radius thanks to Warren lugging her oxygen tanks "hither and yon"!

Honesty was her very core. She was grocery shopping at Foodland (just across the street) and she realized that after she got home she had picked up an item and never paid for it. The next trip up to Creemore back into Foodland she got another of the same item and then tried to explain to the clerk that she needed to pay for two of them - one for today and one for the one she stole last week!

I cannot emphasize enough the love Mom had for her family, for her husband, Warren, and for the love of laughter. The roars of laughter our kitchen walls have heard during rowdy card games and family gatherings!

All her life, her siblings have been her best friends, just as my siblings are my best friends. Many, many times over the years we have heard people say that Sylvia reminded them of Bill Jordan and she would be so pleased as she considered it the ultimate compliment.

As I close on my letter to Mom, I know one thing. I will be emailing this to the Echo – one more time – in honour of my Mom, the strongest lady I have ever had the privilege to know. Love you...Laurie.

Peace in the classroom

By Kristi Green

At Hummingbird Montessori School in Creemore, students practise peace every day. The goal, school owner Sherri Jackson says, it to create peaceful citizens through Montessori education.

Montessori is an educational approach developed by a pediatric physician, Dr. Maria Montessori, in Italy in the early 1900s. Dr. Montessori was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize three times for her work on peace and education.

"The only way to have a peaceful world is if we teach children at the beginning of their lives how to have one," says Jackson, who admits that the program's emphasis on peace is what drew her to become a Montessori teacher in the first place.

The concept of peace is fundamental to the Montessori classroom. The curriculum supports children to listen to others' opinions and speak their minds respectfully, even if they disagree. "They need to learn to manage and see each others' point of view," says Jackson.

Montessori teachers use many different techniques to foster peace and balance in the classroom. They may nurture students' self-awareness through yoga and medication; create opportunities for students to engage with their community such as visiting the food bank; and learn about different cultures and historical figures like Anne Frank and Martin Luther King Jr.

Children who are experiencing a problem can write down their feelings anonymously in a class diary, which Jackson then uses to discuss issues freely with the entire class.

"Together, the class comes up with rules for resolving the issue and the children feel empowered," she says. "The role of the teacher is to step back and let the kids learn to navigate it themselves."

The classroom curriculum also fosters the connections between humans and the environment to give children "the whole perspective," Jackson says.

"We start by learning about the universe and work backwards. This way, the children learn that every living things is just one piece of a massive interconnected structure and it is up to us to maintain harmony and flow. For example, when we're feeling upset about something, it's not just about us — other people are involved, too.

"All humans have the same fundamental needs: food, shelter, water, clothing and transportation. We all need each other. We are all the same."

Lest We Forget

A time to remember

By Kristi Green

These days, it can be hard for veteran Warren Gale to remember what it was like to land on Juno Beach in Normandy a few days after D-Day in June 1944.

Sometimes it can be difficult to separate his own memories from images he has seen on television since then. "It was 70 years ago now," Gale explained.

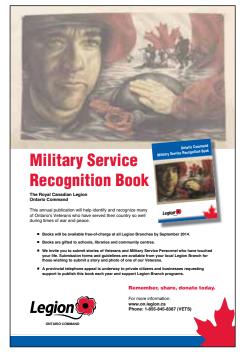

To help preserve the memories of veterans like Gale, the Royal Canadian Legion will be collecting military biographies, stories and photos for a new book to be published in September 2014.

The Military Service Recognition Book will identify and recognize Ontario veterans and provide a record for generations to come. Veterans and family members who are interested in submitting material should contact the Creemore Legion at 705-466-2202.

Proceeds from advertising in the book will cover the cost of printing and distribution, as well a support initiatives at the Legion's more than 400 branches.

Gale, who will help lay the wreath at next week's Remembrance Day ceremony, was a mechanic with the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. Classed as a "Normandy vet," Gale joined the army in 1941, travelled overseas in 1943 and returned to Canada in 1945.

"I firmly believe we have the best country in the world and I hope I played a little part in it," Gale said.

The Creemore Legion, which has five members who are World War II veterans, contributes to veterans' shelter, food and care by running the Poppy Campaign, as well as through functions it holds such as banquets, funerals and weddings.

Legion The also actively supports the community with annual donations of about $8,500 to children's activities such as hockey, baseball and soccer.

"Our vets need to be looked after," said Norma Friest, who will be chairing Creemore's Remembrance Day event. "They gave their lives so we have what we have today."

Service award arrived by post

By Kristi Green When David Allister MacDonald opened mail his last month at home Stayner, he got a start. There, among the bills and notices was long-overdue award for service in World War a Bomber Command Clasp.

"I was surprised," said MacDonald, who was an aero engineer with #429 (Bison) Squadron stationed at Leeming, Yorkshire, England from March 1943 until October 1945. "I'd heard that some of the air crew guys had received this, but they had been to a presentation in Ottawa."

Because MacDonald worked as ground crew, he originally didn't think he qualified for the award. "There were thousands of us," he said. "The air crew guys carried the ball and suffered 90 per cent of the losses, even though the other guys toyed with pretty dangerous stuff."

But after receiving an email notice from the Royal Air Force Bomber

Association advising him to contact Veterans Affairs Canada, he applied for the award.

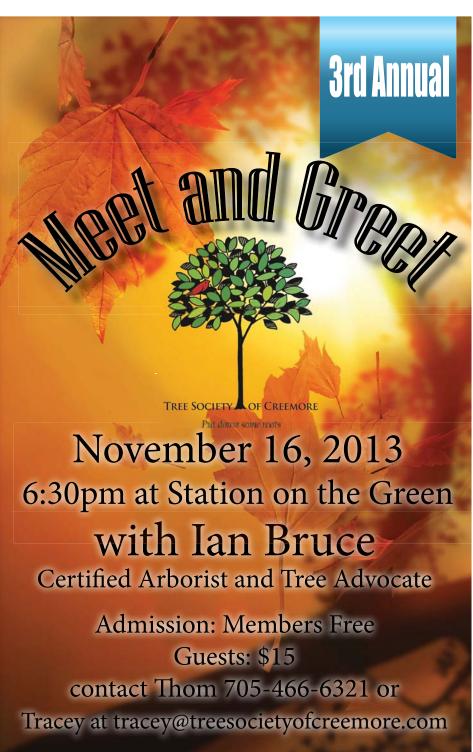

Bomber Command Clasp arrived in his mailbox in October without any prior notification.

RCAF 411 (Huronia) Wing President Robert Coxon of Stayner found out about the award and visited MacDonald at his home to take the picture on page 1.

"I knew MacDonald from his involvement in municipal politics," said Coxon. (MacDonald was the Mayor of Stayner from 1973-76 and 1980-82.) "I wasn't enamoured with the fact that he got the award in the mail."

After MacDonald was discharged from service just before Christmas in 1945, he worked as a local garage mechanic until 1950. He continued his career as a construction engineer at Base Borden for 30 years. MacDonald celebrated his 90th birthday on Saturday, November 2.

The real World War I, according to Royal

The declaration of war in 1914 seemed like a glorious opportunity for the young men of Ontario to go off for travel and adventure. And of course they believed that the enemy would be defeated by Christmas.

BLACKBURN

Stanley Royal, a local young farmer, enlisted. Stanley grew up on the Sixth Line farm which is now the Mingay Tract, which is very popular with hikers, snowshoers and skiers.

After he returned from the war, he often visited his neighbours, Frank and Alice Webster, and told them of his experiences. They compiled these accounts, saved them and I am the fortunate inheritor of this piece of history.

In the 2011 Remembrance Day issue of this paper I wrote about Stanley's exciting days of enlisting, of the tremendous send-off by the local people, the trip across the Atlantic and the welcome given by the English.

In the 2012 issue, the heady days of training disappeared to be replaced by sea sickness crossing the Channel, much discomfort on the way to the front and finally the horrors of the gas attack imposed on them by the Germans. There followed a devastating loss by his battalion. Only 90 remained out of 900.

Stanley wastes no gentle words in describing the reaction of his fellow men following the battle:

"When the usual grist of London newspapers arrived describing the engagement it was apparent that The War Office was trying to cover up the truth. They didn't want the news to get back to Canada that the Canadian Division had been practically annihilated; they reported six thousand casualties when the actual count was over ten thousand out of thirteen thousand men. The War Office had to make somebody the goat so they reported that the Canadian Division suffered heavy loss because we lacked discipline; that we ran in front of our own machine gun fire and similar yarns.

"It was a damnable, infernal lie. Nothing of the kind ever happened. This heaping of insult on injury by blundering, incompetent Generals so enraged us that for the moment we felt more like fighting the British than the Germans.

"We were left in low, untrenchable ground with no artillery, communication trenches and no food because no provision was made to protect runners or ration carriers. Our lines were raked from end to end with artillery and machine gun fire; the air poisoned with gas and in it all the Canadians holding on, starving and perishing for a position the Germans did not want for they had it well filled with poison gas.

"The following day Brig. Gen. Turner came to where we were buried in this enclosure to congratulate the General on the stand we made. I was a few feet from the Colonel and heard Turner ask him to take his men up to Hill 60 and put them over the top to cheer them up. It was plain enough for everyone to see that the men were unable to march let alone go into action.

"Col. Currie replies 'Men? Hell, I have no men. They have had nothing to eat for days, the road is lined with British troops and when they have done as much as my men I will put mine in again and not before.'

"They parted without a salute and shortly after Col. Currie was discharged. It was easy to see that the request was made knowing Currie would refuse, thus providing an excuse for his discharge.

"That night the remnant of our battalion was taken to act as reserves for a French brigade. Here we saw the French soldiers attack the German line; the spirit and dash they showed and the suddenness with which they forced back the German lines was an inspiration. It was here we first saw the French 75 mm guns in action. Each gun would throw about thirty shells every minute. They were a marvel of perfection.

"On going back to the previous position we were reinforced by the fifteen or twenty men and spent two days billeted about two miles from Valmertinge."

Stanley Royal survived many minor skirmishes and also the major battles including Vimy Ridge. He was able to come home after Armistice, farmed for many years and retired in Creemore where he lived across from the United Church.

Knox church's 145th

By Marc Royal

On Sunday, November 10 at 2 pm, Knox Presbyterian Church Dunedin will be hosting our 145th anniversary service. This year we have planned an afternoon of celebration through our service of commemoration and a special musical event for the community to enjoy.

We are pleased to host our guest speaker, Sean Angel, youth ministry leader at First Presbyterian Church in Collingwood. Sean has brought a wide variety of skills and interest to the position of Director of Youth and Family Ministries over the last four years. Sean is a big kid at heart who loves to share God's love to all he comes in contact with. He is married to his wonderful wife, Michelle, and together they share their home with their four-year-old son Matthias and the newest addition to the family, Samuel.

Leading the musical portion will be "The Key is Friends," a group of four retired or semi-retired friends for whom music has played a significant role throughout their lives. Their repertoire is made up of various styles of folk, soft rock, country and western, broadway, gospel, jazz, pop – and yes, even some opera! Believing the two best ways to lift spirits are through music and laughter, performances contain both because "your laughter is music to our ears."

It will be "welcome home" for group member and former Lavender community resident, Perry Wilkinson. Perry was musical director at Knox Dunedin and has devoted his adult life to the musical directorship at Knox Presbyterian Church in Walkerton and is largely responsible for the success of the regionally acclaimed annual "Singer Christmas Tree" performance.

But the best part is that you are personally invited! Knox Dunedin continues to work diligently to foster appreciation for many lives invested in building our small but warm-hearted community, and to welcome our many newcomers who chose this community for their families to call home!

Cat calls to control colonies

Thousands of years ago, cats were worshipped as gods. Cats have never forgotten this. – Anonymous

I have belonged to many groups and societies over the years, but one group that I am very happy to belong to is the Creemore Cat Group.

This group of dedicated women and men work hard to keep the feral cat colonies of Creemore fed, healthy and under control by spaying and neutering them.

If you have ever had anything to do with feral cats, you know that they are really not the least bit interested in being cuddled or fawned over. In fact, they would rather stay as far away from you as possible.

This makes the act of trapping them and handling them a little tricky and dangerous. However, it is necessary to catch these cats so that they can be spayed and neutered to keep their numbers in check.

A female cat can have as many as four litters of kittens a year. If each litter numbers four then those four can be responsible for four kittens each times four times a year...well, you do the math and the numbers will astound you.

So far, this dedicated group of brave people (remember feral cats are dangerous) have caught and "fixed" 78 cats.

How do we keep track of the ones that have been altered? Simple: the tip of their ears is notched, so from a distance we can see if "Tom" or "Queenie" has been to the vet office. If one of these animals is caught again and we can clearly see that they have already had the surgery, then they are released back to the colony. Like any diligent, caring group, any animal who is sick to the point of no return is humanely euthanized.

There are three main cat colonies in Creemore. They are all fed, watered and offered warm safe outdoor housing. The members of the group keep an eye on all the cats and take note of any who are showing signs of illness. Every day, the cats are fed and checked on.

When kittens are noticed (some females are pretty darn smart and seem to avoid being trapped), a plan of attack goes into action. With kittens there is a small window in which capture and rehabilitation is possible. But mother cats are very good at hiding and moving their babies. As soon as they are spotted, the army of kitty catchers moves into action.

These kittens are put into foster homes where they are socialized, vaccinated, spayed or neutered. They are then ready for adoption. All of this feeding and medical treatment requires money; many of these services are paid for out-of-pocket by the members.

We have several fundraisers throughout the year: the coffee hut at the Creemore Farmers' Market, baking, selling cat-themed trinkets and our biggest fundraiser of all, Zumba. This year, Zumba is being held on Saturday, November 16 at Nottawasaga and Creemore Public School. If you have never tried Zumba, this is the purrfect time to give it a whirl. Your body parts will love you for it!

The cost is $15 in advance or $20 at the door. We will also have some great prizes and a chance to win a beautiful handknit afghan made by one of our very talented ladies.

I hope that you are able to support this great cause. These cats are working hard here in Creemore, the village of many restaurants – just think of how many rats you have not seen; proof positive, I say.

If you require any info or would like to donate to the Creemore Cats, please call me at Creemore Veterinary Services 705-466-3731 or at my home 705-466-3716.

IN MEMORIAM

Cleve Kidd October 27, 1956 to November 7, 2012

They say there is a reason, They say that time will heal, But neither time nor reason, Will change the way we feel, For no-one knows the heartache, That lies behind our smiles. No-one knows how many times We have broken down and cried, We want to tell you something, So there won't be any doubt, You're so wonderful to think of, But so hard to be without. Love Esther and family and the Kidd

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our Mom Shirley Oster who left us on November 4,

Somewhere beyond the shadows Dwells a dear mother of ours. Whom we looked on as a treasure, Whom we cherished as divine. But God called the one we loved away, Forget you Mom we never will, As years toll on we miss you still. The blow was hard, the shock severe. Only those who have lost can tell How sad is parting and no farewell. But God in goodness, comforts us To bear our bitter cross;

He is the only one who knows How heavy is our loss.

Love always Darlene, Dianne, Tom, Lorraine and Lorne & families

Community Liaison Committee

We're Listening!

Dufferin Wind Power Inc. is making long-term investments in Ontario's green energy future and is seeking your participation. DWPI received Renewable Energy Approval from the Ministry of the Environment on June 10, 2013 for its wind power project in Dufferin County. The project will generate 91.4 megawatts of wind power, enough to power between 22,500 and 30,000 households per year. This notice is the first step in establishing a Community Liaison Committee (CLC) to provide a venue for meaningful and ongoing discussion between the project team and community members.

How are we listening?

Dillon Consulting is creating this Community Liaison Committee in Dufferin County to discuss the construction, operation and decommissioning of the Dufferin Wind Farm.

This will be an opportunity for approximately 20 selected CLC members to:

- Exchange information
- Listen to community suggestions to minimize impacts; and
- Assist with identifying and resolving community concerns

The CLC will seek representation from Dufferin County residents & landowners, agricultural & business communities, aboriginal communities, municipalities, government agencies, local organizations, and special interest groups.

Become a member of the CLC

Interested in representing your community and discussing the Dufferin Wind Farm? CLC members will be responsible for attending a minimum of four (4) meetings over a two-year period. Meetings will take place on a weekday evening for approximately two to three hours each. Membership selection will be based on balanced representation from the various groups listed above.

Apply Today!

An application form is available at the DWPI project office and on the project website: www.dufferinwindpower.ca/community.
